Slavoj Zizek s argues then that the process is also contemporary and also about black power and Cornel West should say it is how news mixes

I. Jacques Ranciere, what then is the poor people and aesthetics mixed this way?

II. I argue it is just the process of art and art informalism which then is also about cinema and footage now.

III. All of this becomes today, which is about Chris Gardner and Matthew Derar following Deterior and earlier working in Microsoft and other companies. And it is all history passing us by.

“Success is a journey, not a destination. Enjoy the process, learn from your experiences, and never stop growing.”
Chris Gardner

Now I articulate this to Slavoj.

“I meant success is then compared to greatness and we are then like the Greeks all about history and the future. But we should be about learning, and learning from the people and all of this makes us learn in companies how to learn more and more about computers then, and all of this is research and innovation and creativity and Soviet history makes us love it all.”

”How to see us successfully then is articulated to the problematic of success, something like a whole process of producing a work of art or a work of computer development that Sirohi is really about. He fits American company culture and is still Marxist and that makes him Soviet as well.

I argue success is such an image. These images that speak about all of us.”
